Floor Fight On Pentagon Reorganization Looms In Senate; Debate Due By Mid-July

The Senate Armed Services Committee has announced that it will call three top retired officers to testify on the Pentagon Reorganization plan on 8 July.

The witnesses will be Admiral Arthur W. Radford, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Admiral Robert B. Carney, former Chief of Naval Operations; and General Carl Spaatz, former Air Force Chief of Staff.

A hot fight—similar to that which forced sharp party-line voting in the House—is shaping up in the Senate for the Pentagon Reorganization bill.

The measure is expected to be reported out of the Senate Armed Services Committee by 10 July, and scheduled for floor debate by the middle of the month, at the latest.

Indications are that the Committee will make few, if any, major changes in the House plan, thus forcing Republican leaders in the Senate to battle for three recommended amendments demanded by the President.

Some Senators can also be expected to fight for changes not recommended either by the House or the Administration. Senators Styles Bridges (R-NH), Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), and Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) have expressed dissatisfaction with features of both proposals.

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, and General Randolph McCall Pate, Commandant of the Marine Corps, were re-scheduled to testify before the Armed Services Committee on 3 July.

The testimony of both officers had been postponed by Committee Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) until written assurance could be obtained from Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy that Pentagon witnesses would not face reprisal if their views differed from those of the President.

Senator Russell issued the ultimatum after Secretary McElroy told newsmen that he "regretted" the testimony of Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations. Admiral Burke supported the House-passed bill.

In reply (text of Secretary's statement, next page), Secretary McElroy said in his opinion there should be no "question of retaliation or penalty" for officers differing with the President, but added that this position would not prevent him "from being disappointed or regretful when an official of the Department of Defense does not support fully the recommendations of the President."

Following receipt of the letter on 25 June, Senator Russell set a new date to hear the testimony of General Taylor and General Pate. The Marine Commandant

Armed Copters Show Army's "Cavalry Of Atomic Battlefield" At Project Ammo

Manpower Cut Warning, Page 28

HUECO RANGE, NEW MEXICO

ARMY aviation—self labeled the "Cavalry of the Atomic Battlefield"—is getting a stronger punch and a louder voice.

This was demonstrated here during Project Ammo, the Army's mobile missile orientation.

The powerful display of Army missile firepower was interrupted for an hour 30 June to permit the Army Aviation Center at Ft. Rucker, Ala., to show a star-studded audience of more than 400 military men and industrial leaders new achievements in mobility and firepower—also voice power.

An armed helicopter demonstration began with the basic armed reconnaissance helicopter, a Bell H-13 Sioux armed with two .30 caliber machine guns.

A second H-13 showed its armament of four .30 calibers in action, and a third Sioux fired two .30 calibers and six 2-inch folding fin rockets.

It was reported that work is progressing at Rucker on the use of infrared to permit use of armed choppers at night.

The 'copter firepower demonstration

Polo Greats Witness A-Age Cavalry

Some famed army horsemen, including a number of military polo greats, were among the audience which saw the new-fangled cavalry in action.

Spectators who watched the armed helicopter demonstration included, among others, Lt. Gen. John H. Collier, Fourth Army CG; Lt. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, Third Army CG, and Maj. Gen. John K. Waters of Continental Army Command, all well-known Army polo players.

Another famed polo player, Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, USA-Ret., also was a participant in Project Ammo.

then was stepped up as a Sikorsky H-19 Chickasaw fired its two .30 calibers and 24 folding fin 2.75 aerial rockets.

Described as a "weapon ship," another H-19 showed the employment of two .30 calibers and 132 experimental 1.5-inch aerial rockets being built by the Rocketdyne division of North American Aviation.

To show how helicopters in the future will afford protection for the troops they carry, a Vertol H-21 Shawnee fired two .30 calibers, two .50 caliber aerial machine guns, and 24 of the 2.75 rockets. This craft also had a machine gun mounted in each door.

At this point in the demonstration, it was revealed that successful tests have

SAGE Air Defense Net Begins Operations At McGuire, Will Cover Nation In 1961

McGUIRE AFB, N. J.

A completely revised air defense system for the United States began to take shape as the first unit of the new Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) System was put into operation here 27 June.

One of 29 similar installations to be established throughout the United States, and possibly in Canada, within the next three years, this $135 million complex of radar and computer operations can detect approaching enemy aircraft hundreds of miles before they reach U. S. shores.

Giant IBM computers in the system automatically plot the course of approaching aircraft and, when directed, guide defensive fighters and missiles to their targets.

The 29 similar centers which will comprise the total SAGE network will be divided into seven divisions, with top echelon central control at North American Air Defense Command Headquarters, Ent AFB, Colo., where a general officer will always be on hand to make final combat decisions.

Other SAGE centers now nearing completion in the northeast area are located at Boston and Syracuse, N. Y. As Division Headquarters, the Syracuse installation will have two separate computer com-was expected to again take a strong stand against the President's recommendations, as he did in the House.

Secretary McElroy, recalled to the Committee witness chair on 1 July, said that he has "not been able to understand what the great concern of the Marines is." He said, "As far as I am concerned, I regard them as an essential part of our military force." He added that "it must be clearly apparent" that any move to decimate the Marine Corps would be the subject of immediate Congressional action "whether Congress were in session or not."

The Defense Secretary also disagreed with those who have charged that the Reorganization Plan will create greater centralization. He said the changes will "increase centralization of command responsibility" but greater decentralization in the Pentagon if Congress approves the President's proposed amendment erasing language which requires the Secretary of Defense to exercise his authority "through" the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

He said "effective decentralization requires that most decisions be made at lower levels," and this will be possible if the authority of the Assistant Secretaries of Defense is broadened.

He asked and was granted permission to bring "three or four Assistant Secretaries" with him to an executive session on 2 July. The session was scheduled by Chairman Russell to permit the Department to cite examples where the Services have delayed, obstructed or failed to carry out Defense Department policies.

In some instances, Secretary McElroy testified, Defense Department representatives on the lower levels have attempted to obtain information from the Services and have been told flatly that the information "is no business of the Department of Defense."

Earlier, the Committee heard pro- and con- testimony from witnesses outside the Defense Department.

General Clifton B. Cates, former Commandant of the Marine Corps, charged that unless the Congress restricts the power of the Secretary of Defense to transfer, consolidate, reassign or abolish combatant functions, "we may well wake up some morning and discover that the Marine Corps has been reorganized and consolidated and reassigned into non-entity."

General Cates said it was an "advantage" to appear as a private citizen because he was "perfectly free" to speak his mind. He said he was "not sure" that the official witnesses from the Pentagon "have enjoyed similar latitude."

The former Commandant suggested amendments to the House bill which would retain the status quo of the JCS structure, the present numerical limitation on the Joint Staff, the present powers of the Secretary of Defense to transfer functions, and the recently abandoned system of utilizing the military departments as "executive agents."

He said none of the periodic reorganizations of the Defense Department have ever yet been given "an adequate chance to work."

He told the Committee it is being asked to approve a plan "which will effectively convert the Chairman of the JCS into a national chief of staff" and the Joint Staff "into the very armed forces general staff which the law now expressly forbids."

General Cates compared the "battlefield general staff" organization with "national policies at the seat of government." The combat staff, he said, is organized to arrive at a decision as quickly as possible and to eliminate from consideration all other alternative courses of action. "Both of these actions are exceedingly dangerous—possibly fatal—when applied to strategic or global problems."

He noted that "a bad decision is always better than no decision" in battle,

SECRETARY'S LETTER

The following is the text of the letter sent last week by Secretary McElroy to Senator Russell:

So that there may be no misunderstanding on the part of the chairman of the Armed Services Committee and its members, I am glad to restate my position regarding testimony given before Congress by military and civilian members of the defense organization.

It is my conviction that officials of the department when testifying before Congress should give their personal judgment and opinion when asked for them. With consideration of his position as a member of the defense organization, each department witness would be expected to answer such questions frankly and honestly in the light of his professional knowledge and experience.

As I have stated in testifying before the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives, there should not, in my opinion, be any question of retaliation or penalty for such testimony. As I also have stated, once decisions have been taken on matters covered by a witness' testimony I would expect the witness to perform under them without any question or reservation.

There is nothing in this position which would keep me from being disappointed or regretful that an official of the department does not support fully the recommendations of the President. My honest statement of disappointment in an informal press conference certainly does not in my mind constitute a rebuke or an indication of possible reprisal.

I believe my position on this whole subject is clear to the members of the defense organization.

but "With regard to strategic planning—as distinct from tactics—and to national policies at the seat of government, the foregoing axiom should be reversed; No decision is infinitely preferable to a bad one."

The former Marine leader advised the Senate group that "long-range, strategic decisions of the JCS must not be submitted to split-second, tactical treatment." He said, "Under no circumstances should they be ramrodded through our top military levels by the decision making assembly line which the present bill would create."

He declared that the House-passed bill is "too little different from what the Administration originally proposed." If enacted, he said, it would:

- Lay the groundwork for merger of the military departments.
- Transform the Chairman of the JCS into a single chief over all the armed forces and convert the Joint Staff into an armed forces general staff.
- Set the stage for Maginot-Line type mistakes and a mandatory single point of view in formulation of military policy and doctrine.

The Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association also lashed out at the reorganization plan. Lt. Col. Arthur B. Hanson, USMCR, Judge Advocate General of the Association, said if the proposals advanced by the Administration are approved by Congress, a "mere sweep of the pen in the Pentagon could do away with the reserve forces of this Nation, including the National Guard."

Colonel Hanson said the Committee should "reject" the President's recommended changes. He urged the adoption of amendments which support the recommendations made by General Cates.

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the American Legion both strongly supported the President.

Maj. Gen. Otto L. Nelson, USA-Ret., speaking for the Chamber, rejected the claim that the President's recommended changes pose a "serious constitutional question." He said "the fundamental issue is whether Congress is willing to give the President and Secretary of Defense the flexibility that is necessary to manage the Department of Defense effectively and efficiently."

General Nelson urged the Committee to delete from the House bill the requirement that the Secretary of Defense exercise his authority "through" the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force. This provision, he said:

- Formalizes and strait-jackets the internal administration of the Defense Department.
- Perpetuates the philosophy of "separateness" that has hampered effective and economical administration.

• Denies the Secretary of Defense the most important of all management tools—effective control.

He also urged elimination of the requirement that Congress exercise veto power over the transfer, reassignment, consolidation and abolition of major combatant functions.

The American Legion, in a statement submitted by its past National Commander, George N. Craig, took a similar position. Criticizing the "cumbersome, awkward and inadequate system" that "now exists," Craig asked the Committee to accept the President's suggested changes.

Governor Milward L. Simpson of Wyoming and Clayton L. Burwell of the Naval Reserve Association opposed the President's suggested changes.

Army Engineers Will Make Dual Appraisals

Maj. Gen. E. C. Itchner, Army Chief of Engineers, has issued instructions providing that two independent appraisals are to be made of all property slated for acquisition by the Army.

In the past only one appraisal was made.

In a letter to all Division Engineers the General said that one appraisal should be made by a local contract appraiser, if possible. If this is impractical, he said, then two separate appraisals will be made by Staff appraisers.

The instruction said that the higher of the two appraisals will be offered to the landowner provided that the price is realistic and conforms with acceptable appraisal techniques.

The decision was made in face of the "often-heard complaints that the Corps values are too low . . ."

STEEP "DEEP" RISE

A Navy example of the sharp rise in the cost of military weapons is the projected cost for the Fleet Ballistic Missile submarines—from $90-$100 million each.

This compares with about $30 million for the first atomic submarines.

plexes, one to act as regular SAGE control center, and the other to unify and store information from all other centers within the division.

First Division In 18 Mos.

All units of the Syracuse division, including SAGE centers as far south as Ft. Lee, Va., are scheduled for completion within the next 18 months.

Heart of the SAGE system is its computer complex, which records, stores and analyzes information from land, sea and air based radars, the Civil Aeronautics Administration, Military Flight Centers, and the Ground Observer Corps. These information sources are connected with SAGE by land communication lines, radio and telephone.

In the SAGE center, the local Air Defense Commander can monitor up-to-the-second reports of the air battle situation and automatically direct the operations of all defense units under his command.

The center itself is a huge, windowless building about four stories high. It houses its own heating, power and air conditioning equipment, and at least two sets of all components essential to its operations.

Designed with overlapping areas of surveillance, SAGE centers can double-up to monitor or direct operations in adjacent sectors. Thus, if one center is destroyed, neighboring centers can immediately take over its functions.

No Missile Decision

Although there will be close coordination and automatic transfers of information between SAGE and northern early warning lines like the Dew line, these distant radars will not be made an integral part of SAGE.

At present it is not known whether future missile warning systems will be incorporated into SAGE or established separately.

Total cost of the SAGE system, including its integral radar and communications network, is expected to exceed $7.2 billion, and will require approximately $489 million per year to maintain after 1961.

conducted at Ft. Rucker with a new helicopter public address system. Developed by Radio Corporation of America its purpose is to permit commanders to maintain contact with troops upon landing, despite the noise of the chopper blades; it also can be used in flight to maintain contact between one chopper and another.

The demonstration also saw participation of a Sikorsky H-34 Choctaw, armed with two .30 calibers, two .50 calibers and rockets.

Conclusion of the aviation center activity was a tactical demonstration which showed how an experimental aerial combat reconnaissance company would be employed.

In this operation, eight Sioux reconnaissance choppers, flying only a few feet above the ground, scouted an enemy position, much as was done by cavalry forces in bygone days.

Laying down a suppressive fire, the H-13's were followed by two H-21's which quickly delivered infantry forces to the scene of the action as a rocket-armed H-34 "weapon ship" blasted at enemy troops.

Army officials emphasized that the demonstration here showed only the "marriage" of present weapons to present helicopters. They indicated that with industry's help, additional firepower for new 'copters and Stol aircraft would be provided.

It was conceded that sufficient data has not yet been obtained and the aviation center spokesmen left no doubt of their conviction that there's an important role to be played by the atomic age cavalry.

AF Family Services Will Be Unified

Air Force efforts to emphasize the first class status of military personnel and their dependents have resulted in a new consolidation of personal and family services within that Department.

Contained in AFR 34-15, the consolidation changes the name of the program from Personal Affairs to Personal and Family Service. A similar change has been made in the subsidiary Dependents Assistance Program, now called the Family Services Program.

Major innovation of the plan is the assignment of Personal and Family Services Officers on the base staff level to provide continuing advice and assistance for the varied Air Force personnel service functions. These officers will work closely with the Red Cross, Legal Assistance Program and the Chaplain Program.

Also authorized at the installation level are special Personal and Family Service Offices to emphasize the physical consolidation of related service programs and provide a unified center for information, counseling and assistance.

530th FA Bn. Fires Corporal For Visitors

OROGRADE RANGE, N. MEX.

It was Mainz to New Mexico as the 530th FA Battalion fired a spectacularly successful Corporal missile shot during project ammo.

The 530th is at the Ft. Bliss, Tex., Air Defense Center complex for practice firings of the Corporal from its permanent station in Mainz, Germany.

The Corporal, for which Firestone Tire and Rubber Company is prime contractor for the frame and Gilfillan Bros., Inc., for the radar and other ground guidance equipment, hit a target at a distance of 31 miles after a flight of 166 seconds. This is about a third of its full range.

The firing was supervised by the 3d Guided Missile Group, which is responsible for surface-to-surface missile training here, under command of Lt. Col. William H. O'Connell. Capt. George Muir was the briefing officer.

Captain Muir noted that there are six Corporal battalions deployed with the Seventh Army in Europe and two with SETAF in Northern Italy.

NS Guantanamo And USS F. D. Roosevelt Win Top Honors Among All Navy Messes

The Naval Station at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, took first place in the first annual Ney Memorial Awards, as the best mess ashore, and the USS Franklin D. Roosevelt (CVA-42), attached to the Atlantic Fleet, won top honors for the first mess afloat.

The Ney Memorial Awards Committee, composed of U. S. Navy officers and officials of the Executive Stewards' and Caterers' Association, who selected the winners, also announced two runners-up. Headquarters, Columbia River Group, Pacific Reserve Fleet at Tongue Point, Astoria, Oregon, was runner-up in the ashore category, and the USS Finch (DER-328) of the Pacific Fleet took second place in the afloat category.

Top messes and runners-up will receive trophy plaques, while 28 semi-finalists will be awarded special certificates for their outstanding food service performance.

Representatives from the Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and from the carrier, USS Franklin D. Roosevelt, have been invited to attend the Executive Stewards' and Caterers' Association's convention at Grand Rapids, Mich., 17-20 August. As guests of honor, the men will receive their trophies at a special ceremony.

Evaluation of the Navy messes was based on efficiency of food preparation, serving techniques, cleanliness and management.

The Executive Stewards' and Caterers' Association, composed of executives in the fields of food procurement, preparation, management and service, is sponsoring the 1958 and 1959 Ney Memorial Awards for the Navy.

The Ney Memorial Awards were named for the late Capt. Edward F. Ney, Supply Corps, USN, who was director of the Subsistence Division in the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts during World War II.

The following shore and ship messes will receive special certificates for their outstanding food service performance: Submarine Barracks, Portsmouth, N. H.; Receiving Station, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Naval Air Station, Columbus, Ohio; Naval Air Station, Memphis, Tenn.; and Naval Air Station, New Orleans, La.

Other shore messes include Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.; Naval Air Station, Miramar, Calif.; Naval Air Station, Moffett Field, Calif.; Naval Air Station, Barbers Point, Hawaii; Naval Communication Station, Balboa, C. Z.; Naval Station, Kodiak, Alaska; and Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md.

Also Naval Communication Facility, Yokosuka, Japan; Naval Station, Guam; Naval Air Station, Cubi Point, P. I.; Naval Station, Argentina, Newfoundland; and Naval Air Facility, Naples, Italy.

Outstanding ship messes that received certificates of recognition included: USS Norton Sound (AVM-1), USS Talladega (APA-208), USS Taconic (AGC-17), USS Northampton (CLC-1) and USS Yosemite (AD-19).

Also the USS Bulwark (MSO-425), USS Excel (MSO-439), USS Tolovana (AO-64), USS Rigel (AF-58), USS Bashaw (SSK-241), and USS Gilmore (AS-16).

New Manpower Chief

Former Under Secretary of the Army Charles C. Finucane was nominated by President Eisenhower on 27 June to be Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Personnel and Reserve Forces. He will succeed the late William H. Francis, jr.

Army's Atomic Air Defense Missiles Are On Site, Secretary Brucker Reveals

FT. BLISS, TEX.

THE Army has added a surface to air atomic capability to the air defense of the United States. This achievement was made known here by Secretary Wilber M. Brucker.

Asked by a JOURNAL reporter if the Army had met its previously announced schedule of installing the first Nike Hercules unit by the end of June, the Secretary answered affirmatively.

This would indicate that Nike Hercules is on site in the Washington-Baltimore, New York, and Chicago areas.

The Secretary speaking at news conference in the Officers' Club at 11 p.m. on 30 June following an address to a project ammo audience, said work on the Hercules program will be pushed.

Secretary Brucker, said that "whereas the Nike Ajax can destroy individual planes, the Hercules can kill whole formations of planes."

Among those seated at the speakers table were two industry officials whose companies have played leading roles in the Nike programs. They are W. C. Tinus of Bell Telephone Laboratories and Donald Douglas, Jr., President of the Douglas Aircraft Co.

The Hercules was shown publicly for the first time to newsmen and industry representatives attending the project ammo missile shoot.

M/Sgt. Hoff Directs, Army CofS Complies

MCGREGOR RANGE, NEW MEXICO

ARMY M/Sgt. L. E. Hoff of the Ft. Bliss, Tex., Air Defense Center can mark 30 June 1958, as a day of distinction in his military career.

That's when the sergeant gave an order—it was quickly executed—to General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff, before an audience which included General Nathan F. Twining, JCS Chairman.

Sergeant Hoff was operating a radio controlled aerial target during a project ammo demonstration. After putting the RCAT through its paces, the sergeant was directed to bring it down by means of a special parachute device which permits reuse of the targets.

The sergeant backed up, his small control box in hand, until he stood before the spot where General Taylor was seated in the stands.

At this point, Sergeant Hoff summoned assistance from the Chief of Staff, who was to be given the honor of "commanding" the parachute release.

The sergeant gave his order in direct manner: "Now, sir." General Taylor complied.

USMA Cadets Will Get On-The-Job Training With 2d Inf., 82d, And 101st Abn Divisions

A new concept, drastically affecting summer training procedure for cadets, has been initiated by the Superintendent and Commandant of Cadets of the U. S. Military Academy. The new schedule, sponsored by Lt. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson and Brig. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, is being put into operation with the approval of Department of the Army.

Under the new program, approximately two-thirds of the Second Class (Juniors) will receive practical, on-the-job leadership training with three Regular Army divisions. The remaining one-third will gain practical experience as squad leaders in the New Cadet (Freshman) Barracks.

Selected units include 2d Inf. Div., Ft. Benning, Ga.; 101st Abn. Div., Ft. Campbell, Ky.; and the 82d Abn. Div., Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Prior summer training trips covered a seven-week period, during which time cadets observed demonstrations of training and equipment at various Army, Navy and Air Force installations. This year the trip was limited to about 16 days.

During their four weeks with a combat-ready unit, Cadets will actively participate in the division training program so as to observe closely the command, training and administrative functions performed by junior officers at company and platoon levels.

Active participation in command roles, under the supervision of qualified junior officers, will provide practical experience in the duties the Cadet will be expected to perform upon graduation from the Academy.

Cadets also will gain an additional insight in the daily professional life and living conditions of the Officer Corps of the Army.

Army Ordnance Opens "Prospect Study" 15 July; Focuses On Limited War

MAJ Gen. John B. Medaris, Commanding General of the Ordnance Missile Command, will deliver the keynote address 15 July for "Prospect Study," a project aimed at examining tactical requirements and technical solutions to equipment problems in limited war.

The Army Ordnance Corps established a summer study group of top scientists from universities and industry to look into this matter during sessions from 15 July-29 August at Newcastle, Maine.

The project is the responsibility of the Future Weapon Systems Agency of the Ballistic Research Laboratories, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Maj. Gen. August Schomburg, Deputy Chief of Ordnance, will open the first session and introduce General Medaris.

Memorial Library Dedicated In Korea

The dedication of the Eighth U. S. Army Memorial Library at the Korean Military Academy in Seoul recently climaxed a fund campaign launched in 1952 by General James A. Van Fleet, USA-Ret., former Commanding General, Eighth U. S. Army.

The library building was completed in April 1953 at an estimated cost of $200,000. Funds for its construction were donated by United Nations military personnel of the Eighth U. S. Army during the Korean conflict in memory of their fallen comrades. Approximately 6,000 books have been purchased for the library.

The Van Fleet inspired project was supported by General Maxwell D. Taylor during his service as Commanding General, Eighth U. S. Army and was carried through to completion by General I. D. White, former Commanding General, AFSE/Eighth U. S. Army, and currently Commander in Chief, United States Army, Pacific.

General White dedicated the library in conjunction with the annual graduation exercises for cadets of the Korean Military Academy.

WAC Chief To Europe

Col. Mary Louise Milligan, WAC Director, will make a staff visit to the European area 9 July to 17 August.

The purpose of the trip is to observe utilization, housing, and other matters pertaining to WAC personnel.

Colonel Milligan will be accompanied by Lt. Col. Margaret A. Kimpton, WAC Staff Advisor, U. S. Army Europe.

Army Closes Caven Point Terminal

The Army has decided to end operations at Caven Point Terminal, near Jersey City.

The decision was made following a Defense Department study last January of military ocean terminal facilities in the New York Harbor area. It is estimated that the deactivation will result in savings of about $780,000 a year. The Caven Point Terminal employs 11 military and 150 civilian personnel.

The Terminal has served primarily as an open storage area and dunnage yard for Brooklyn Army Terminal and as a shipping point for nearly all military and privately owned vehicles and equipment to and from overseas destinations.

Workloads and employees will be absorbed by the Brooklyn Terminal on 58th Street. During peak periods, the facilities of the Naval Supply Depot, Bayonne, N J., will be used.

Army Air Maintenance Center Work Started

Ground has been broken at the U. S. General Depot, New Cumberland, Pa., for construction of a new Army aviation maintenance center.

Luria Engineering Co., Bethlehem, Pa., will construct a hangar, work-shop and runway-connection with the Harrisburg airport, at a cost of $1-million. When completed, the new facilities will handle maintenance of Army airplanes for the northeastern section of the U. S.

Present for the ground-breaking ceremonies were Col. Charles E. Capito, commanding officer of the Quartermaster Depot at New Cumberland; Col. Stanley T. B. Johnson, Baltimore district engineer; Earl Belknap, resident engineer for the Corps of Engineers; E. M. Allison, superintendent of Luria Engineering; and members of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

Maj. McCauley To Canada

Maj. Gates W. McCauley, USAF, is being reassigned from Central Air Defense Force, Richards-Gebaur AFB, Mo. to the 915th Squadron, Sioux Lookout, Ontario, Canada.

Major McCauley plans to take his wife Josephine, and his daughter, Jill, to Canada with him. The Major served as Assistant to Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations at CADF.

"BEST QUALIFIED" SYSTEM EXTENDED

The Army 1 July extended the "best qualified" method of promotion to selections for both permanent and temporary advancements to major, except for Medical, Dental, Nurse, and Medical Specialist Corps officers.

Long used for promotions to colonel, the "best qualified" system has been used for lieutenant colonel (except MC and DC) since 1 January 1958.

For permanent promotions to major and lieutenant colonel, the law prescribes that the lowest selection rate that can be specified by the Secretary of the Army is 80%, which means a four-out-of-five chance for selection.
There is no legal limitation on the selection rate for temporary ranks.

This Giant SPACE-AGE THERMOS Simplifies the Handling of Liquid Gases

How to transport hundreds of gallons of liquefied gases with maximum safety, maintain near-perfect vacuum and hold temperatures approaching 460 degrees below zero without the use of auxiliary refrigeration equipment? This was the problem successfully solved by Beechcraft engineers in only five month's time with the design, development, production, and delivery of the Beechcraft Dewar, first of its type ever produced.

Beechcraft scientists and engineers are at work on numerous projects involving transporting and storing of cryogenic liquids, plus projects in many aeronautical fields. A letter today to our Contract Administration Division will bring full information on how Beechcraft's five major plants, 1 3/4 million square feet of plant area, and 7,000 skilled craftsmen can help solve your research, development, or production problems.

"Rueger" Legislation Goes Under Spotlight

Long-awaited hearings on the "Rueger Bill" were scheduled to open before the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee on 3 July.

The proposed legislation, pending since early January due to the Navy's failure to submit a formal report, would restore the retired pay of former Navy Cdr. Robert B. Rueger and protect the pay of other members of the Armed Forces who are dropped from the retired rolls.

Representatives of both the Navy and the Comptroller General were summoned to testify.

The Comptroller had ruled earlier that the Navy should make no attempt to collect overpayments made to Rueger until Congress had had an opportunity to act on the corrective legislation. A spokesman in the office of the Comptroller told THE JOURNAL on 30 June that this ruling will stand even if the legislation should be held over to the next Congress.

Rueger, whose plight was first publicized in THE JOURNAL, was retired in 1955 after almost 30 years' service, and the following year was convicted by a civilian court on a manslaughter charge and sentenced to five years in prison. He was dropped from the retired rolls and made to forfeit his retired pay, although the Navy, due to what it termed "unknown circumstances," continued to pay him.

When the error was discovered, the Navy notified Rueger (now paroled) that he would have to pay back $3,777.16.

The wide-spread publicity given to the case as a result of a series of JOURNAL articles prompted Congressional action to restore Rueger's pay.

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), who introduced the legislation, is chairman of the subcommittee which will hold hearings on the measure.

Neither the Navy nor the Comptroller General is opposed to the legislation, and it is understood that both will indicate their willingness to accept whatever decision Congress reaches in the matter.

The Kilday proposal, although arising out of the Rueger case and principally affecting the former Navy Commander, also will establish a broad, new pattern for all such cases.

Among other things, it authorizes withdrawal of retired pay from a prisoner during his confinement, but provides that all or any portion of the payments may continue to go to his family. Upon release from prison, the offender would have his retired pay restored in full.

B/G Larson Named Marine R&D Chief

Brig. Gen. August Larson, Assistant Division Commander, Third Marine Division in the Far East, has become duty Chief of Staff (Research and Development) at Headquarters.

He succeeds Brig. Gen. Samuel R. Shaw, who becomes Director, Marine Corps Development Center, Quantico, Va. Brig. Gen. Ronald D. Salmon, currently in the Quantico post has relieved Brig. Gen. Frank H. Wirsig, Commanding General, MCAS El Toro. General Wirsig retired 1 July.

Brig. Gen. Larson

General Larson, 54 on 2 July, enters the Corps as an enlisted man in 1929, was commissioned in 1931. An aviator, he was a member of the Marine Corps Rifle and Pistol Team in 1931, 1936 and 1937, and coached the team 1938-1939.

Maj. Hardaway To Marine Shoot

Maj. Richard J. Hardaway, USMC, has been awarded the Marine Corps' best shooting award, the Lauchlin Currier Trophy.

Major Hardaway won the honor as Corps' top shooter in the recently concluded All-Marine Corps Rifle and Pistol Championships at Camp Matthews, San Diego. He fired a record-breaking aggregate 1130x1200 with the rifle pistol.

S/Sgt. Oren D. Reid, of Camp Pendleton, took first place in the Individual Pistol Match, firing a score of 561x500 to earn First Gold Medal.

Maj. Robert E. Dawson, of the Marine Division, won his second Marine Rifle Championship with 576x600. He previously won the crown in 1953. Major Dawson bested 143 of Corps' top shooters to earn the Douglas Trophy.

2d MAW Activates New Jet Training Squad

Lt. Col. Philip C. DeLong has assumed command of Marine Training Squadron 2 at MCAS Cherry Point, N. C. He reports from Marine Attack Training Squadron 20, a unit of Marine Training and Development Group-20, also at Cherry Point.

Arthur F. Binney, is to train Wing personnel. Training includes Swept Wing Jet Transition, Jet Transition Training, and Ground Support Training Courses.

LOW COST PROTECTION. One of the first in a long line of distinguished U.S. ships, was the MASSACHUSETTS. Built in Newburyport, Mass. in

Eighty-eight years later, NAVY MUTUAL AID ASSO-cost protection to members of the Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, and their families. For SEVENTY-NINE YEARS

 NMA has continued to provide this LOW COST PROTECTION.

Write us today for our free booklet that will explain the full services and benefits of NAVY MUTUAL AID to you.

Five SAC Generals Set For New Posts; Three Hold Records For Speed-Distance

Reassignment of five Strategic Air Command Generals is announced by Commander in Chief, General Thomas S. Power.

SAC's Director of Operations since August 1955, Maj. Gen. Robert H. Terrill, has been named Air Force member of the JCS Joint Strategic Survey Committee.

Maj. Gen. James V. Edmundson, Deputy Director of Operations since February 1957 and one of SAC's most decorated officers with seven DFC's and eight Air Medals, will succeed General Terrill.

Brig. Gen. Keith K. Compton, commanding SAC's 4310th Air Division in Morocco, will become General Edmundson's Deputy.

Brig. Gen. William E. Eubank, who piloted a KC-135 Jet Stratotanker 10,228 miles nonstop and non-refueled from Tokyo to the Azores in April, will succeed General Compton. General Eubank will be replaced as commander of the 93d Bomb Wing at Castle AFB, Calif., by Brig. Gen. John M. Reynolds, who now commands the 810th Air Division at Biggs AFB, Tex. His successor has not been announced.

All reassignments will take place during July.

Three of the Generals have been involved in record flights. General Edmundson piloted a B-47 Stratojet 11,450 miles non-stop from Guam to Morocco in August 1957. The flight, made in 22 hours, 50 minutes, was the longest point-to-point non-stop distance yet flown by jet aircraft.

General Eubank's Tokyo-Azores Islands flight set a new distance record for non-refueled jet flight and also set a speed record of 13 hours, 35 minutes for the Tokyo-Washington, D. C. distance of 7,662 miles.

General Compton, while directing Air Force tests of new aircraft, won the 1951 Bendix Trophy Race by setting a transcontinental air record in an F-86 Jet fighter.

ORANGE GLOW FOR 13,000 PLANES

In a further move to reduce the probability of mid-air accidents the Air Force is providing a new-look to more than 13,000 of its non tactical aircraft.

The planes will be painted a blaze orange on the tail and nose sections and about one-fourth of the top and bottom wing areas from the wing tips.

The Air Training Command launched the program early in 1957 in an effort to help solve the growing problem of traffic congestion at its numerous bases. As a result of safety checks involving 1,600 ATC aircraft treated with the new daylight illuminant paint, 12,000 more non-tactical aircraft will be marked with the bright orange color. Included in the program will be aircraft assigned to the Reserve components.

In ATC testing, the new paint has been exceptionally effective in increasing aircraft daylight detection both air-to-air and ground-to-air under visual conditions. It has been most effective during conditions of reduced visibility resulting from such factors as smoke, haze and dust.

Shameful Discrimination Against Retired

The shameful discrimination against retired members of the Armed Forces that marked action on the Military Pay Act of 1958 is aggravated by the action that has been taken for thousands of civilian Government workers who have retired. Effective 1 August, their pay will be increased by 10%. Retired military persons received only a 6% adjustment.

More important, of course, than a percentage comparison is the fact that the Military Pay Act of 1958 abrogates the historic policy of relating retired military pay to active duty pay. This marks a notorious breach of contract with citizens who have given the best years of their lives to the defense of the Nation.

But mere protests are not enough. What is essential now is that the Department of Defense urge as strongly as possible that the Budget Bureau reconsider its attitude toward retired military pay—the Budget Bureau opposed any pay increase for military people—and that the traditional relationship of retired pay to active pay be restored.

Alarmists may contend that such forceful action by the Pentagon could stir further proposals for a contributory retirement system for the Armed Forces. We don't think that is a sound reason to permit an inequity to continue.

THE JOURNAL takes the position that the present retirement system, voted by Congress and repeatedly endorsed by Congress, will stand on its own merits. We also believe that the case of the obvious discrimination against Service retired people also will stand on its own merits.

What it will take, of course, is courage on the part of Service leaders to state the adverse impact on morale—let alone the injustice—of the second-rate treatment that has been given to retired members of the Fighting Forces.

Let's Have Families—Not Dependents

Because of the legalistic basis of practically everything they do, personnel of the Armed Services have fallen into the practice of using law terms in a great many instances where in civil life they would use a simpler and more expressive word.

One of these situations which THE JOURNAL has bucked for many years is the use of the word "dependents" when one means a wife, son or daughter, or other member of the family group. We are aware that "dependent" has certain legal implications—some who are normally members of the family group may not be dependents within the meaning of the law and the Comptroller General's decisions. Yet we do not believe—and we think we are supported by many wives and children—that dependents is the right word to use. A uniformed fighting man (unless he is a bachelor) is not an entity unto himself. His efficiency and his fighting capacity depend upon the support and the unity of the family group of which he is a member. If they are not happy in the life he is leading, he is not an efficient member of the fighting team. They are not dependent upon him—they are part of his life.

Some years ago, THE JOURNAL curtailed use of the term dependent except when it was necessary in a legal sense. For example THE JOURNAL prefers to say family care rather than dependent care—we believe it is more expressive and more precise. We believe it better describes the position of wives, children, and parents.

It gives us considerable satisfaction, therefore that the Air Force in its new regulation AFR 34-15, uses the designation "Personal and Family Service." We are happy, too, that the Department of the Air Force, in adopting world-wide the excellent program developed by the Strategic Air Command, has changed the name from "Dependents Assistance Program" to "Family Services."

There are nations in which the family group is unimportant. In our form of democracy we believe it is paramount, and nowhere more so than in the Armed Forces.

"Project Ammo" Shows Results of Army-Industry Team

News men attending the Army's "Project Ammo"—the missile orientation and demonstration this week at Ft. Bliss and White Sands—were impressed not only by the ground forces' arsenal of modern weapons but also by the fine cooperative spirit that marks the relationship between the Army and the American industrial firms which develop and supply these weapons.

Helping the Army to arrange and carry out the most varied and largest missile shoot to date were well over 100 industry men from 14 of the nation's largest firms. These were top level officers and scientists and did not include the many technicians on the job.

Furthermore, the industrial firms supplied the airlift that brought press representatives and many other visitors from all parts of the country. By using their executive aircraft these firms transported vastly more than the Army could have done with its very limited air transport facilities while the Army's shortage of funds kept it from calling on MATS for airlift.

The extent of industry integration into the Army's program is demonstrated by the newly established U. S. Army Ordnance Missile Command. This Command embraces the key installations engaged in rocket, missile, and satellite programs in Alabama, California, and New Mexico. Total personnel strength in the Command is about 23,000 of whom approximately 4,500 are military and 18,500 civilians. Of the latter, however, more than 2,000 are employees of Army contractors operating on the installations.

The Army-Industry team for defense is well established, but it has rarely been so well shown as in "Project Ammo."

NCO Morale "Shambles"

I sincerely hope that this letter with suggestions can be published in THE JOURNAL since the subjects are of vital concern to the leaders in the Army from Platoon Leader up to the Secretary of Defense. I hope that this will cause some additional thought on the subjects on which final decision, very shortly, must be made.

Our latest changes have made devastating shambles of the morale of our NCOs. Gentleman, it is a long established fact that the morale of any army is reflected in its non-commissioned officers, so let's build it up, not tear it down.

Subject: Promotion to E8 and E9

Recommend that a one-time (initial) waiver of total service time be made and if they are recommended, all NCOs at present actually in the jobs of First Sergeant and Sergeant Major be promoted. This must be done to protect the young, efficient, aggressive Master Sergeants that we must have in our combat units. Quite a number of NCOs in this category are now holding down First Sergeant and Sergeant Major jobs, but do not have the presently required 3 years' service time. Why penalize these Master Sergeants? They are doing a superior job or they would not be in the slot! I know of three Sergeant Majors in this category—one of whom has four years as a battalion and battle group Sergeant Major.

Subject: Realignment of NCO Grades and Chevrons

Recommend that a method of realigning the NCO grade structure wherein no one will lose a rocket at least at this time. Since we are now in the process (it has so been reported) of making permanent NCO grade appointments, why not announce the new grade structure and titles as permanent appointments and leave the present chevron and title as temporary. This would require additional entries in the Form 20s and adjustment to permanent rank (w/chevron) would be made by attrition over a specified period. Hear Ye: We are not dealing with the most prized reward that the Army can give an NCO for efficiency, reliability, and leadership—"STRIPES."

I hope that lots of thought goes into the final decision!

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—A world which for years has uneasily watched Soviet Russia roll ruthlessly over borders of neighboring small states and, whether by military might or elimination of a few independent leaders, absorb them wholly into the Moscow-satellite system, witnessed this week the first impressive rebellion. It may be presumed that Russian agents in Belgrade sent word that Marshal Tito, once a Stalin favorite, was about to defy Russia, and that the Cominform thereupon seized the initiative and denounced Tito first.

50 Years Ago—Army officers in the Philippines will do well to remember, if they contemplate a visit to Baguio, the site of the Army hospital, that dogs are highly prized by the natives of that region and that there is a regularly weekly market for dog meat in that town, which is in demand there, as it is among the natives of the Hawaiian Islands.

90 Years Ago—The Senate Committee on Indian Affairs is giving close attention to the Osage treaty, which is very generally regarded as a great job. The proposition is to sell nearly 8,000,000 acres of the best lands in Kansas to a railroad company. The opponents of the treaty call it "a bare-faced attempt to enrich unscrupulous speculators at the expense of the settlers, who are entitled to the land at $1.25 an acre."

A.O.A. Thanks

This is my first opportunity to thank you and your associates on THE JOURNAL for the very flattering story you published in last week's issue. To be mentioned in your pages always brings a degree of pride, and this story about us brought an added measure of satisfaction.

THE JOURNAL under your capable direction continues to be an indispensable factor in bringing about a better understanding of the needs and problems of our national defense and the various agencies, including the A.O.A., that are endeavoring to assist.

With warm personal regards.

33 DoD Committees Dissolved; Others Follow

The Defense Department abolished 33 committees 1 July and gave another until 1 August to justify their continuance.

The action results from Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy's decision to "accelerate the decision-making process."

A review of the Interdepartmental Committee structure was ordered by the Secretary about eight weeks ago. At that time he said:

"While the need for effective coordination is fully recognized, it is believed that this objective can be attained through the establishment of less formal working relationships. In other words, should not be necessary to charter a committee with responsibilities, functions and duties in order to confer jointly on matters of mutual interest."

Seventy-two committees, which were established either by law or administrative action, were permitted to remain intact.

Functions performed by the dissolved committees which are deemed to be essential to national defense will be reassigned to appropriate offices or activities.

Among the committees killed is the Joint Intelligence Committee and Joint Strategic Plans Committee. Functions of

Gen. Meloy Gets 4th Army, 3d Star; Chief Signal Officer Also Nominated

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has named Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, Deputy Fourth Army Commander, to succeed retiring Lt. Gen. John H. Collier in the top post at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Also named for three star rank is Maj. Gen. James D. O'Connell, Chief Signal Officer.

General Meloy, wounded in action during the early fighting in Korea, was Army Chief of Information before his assignment to Ft. Sam Houston.

Maj. Gen. Richard W. Stephens, Army Chief of Military History, retired 30 June after more than 34 years service.

these committees will be assigned to the Joint Staff. The Joint Staff may be doubled in size under the pending reorganization bill.

Other committees eliminated are: "Standing Committee on Standards and Specifications for Religious, Moral, Welfare and Recreational Facilities," the "Component Working Group on Locknuts" and the "Committee for Determination of the Requirements for the Wearing and/or Allowance for Uniforms for Fire Fighters."

Action on continuation of public advisory committees and Defense Department representation on interdepartmental and international committee will be taken when the review of joint DoD committees is completed.

Army Antenna Tracks Lunar Probe Vehicle

The Army has been told to begin construction of a radio antenna capable of maintaining communications with space vehicles.

Authority to build the 85-foot antenna—similar to radiotelescopes used to locate and track radio stars—was announced 1 July by Roy W. Johnson, Director of The Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency.

The antenna will be built by the Army's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, and is scheduled to be in operation by the end of the year.

It will be used in the ARPA-sponsored lunar probe project and be located at the Coldstone Test Station in the southwest corner of Camp Irwin, Calif.

The site was selected because it offers extremely low-background noise level, the Defense Department said. Dr. Eberhardt Rechtin, Chief of Guidance Research at JPL, said the "long-range base communications will begin as a one-way link from station to earth—in 1958. The experience gained in tracking and communicating with lunar vehicles at ranges up to 2,500 miles will be utilized in solving the next problem—tracking and communication with lunar vehicles at ranges up to 250,000 miles."

Principal contractors on the project will be: Dlaw-Knox Company, Pittsburgh; Collins Radio Co., Cedar Rapids; and Rucker Company, Oakland.

RELIEVING THE WATCH—1928-1958. RADM. Harry E. Sears, veteran of 30 years' Naval service and currently on duty in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations, swears his son, Joe, recent Yale graduate, into the Navy as an officer candidate. Young Sears begins training at Newport this month, while his father retires next month.

Col. E. H. Lang Heads Waterways Station

Col. Edmund H. Lang, District Engineer, U. S. Lake Survey, Detroit, will become Director of the Army Corps of Engineers' Waterways Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Miss., effective 18 August.

Maj. Ira A. Hunt, assigned to the U. S. Lake Survey, will succeed Colonel Lang.

Colonel Lang will replace Col. Andrew P. Rollins, Jr., who has been Director of the Waterways Experiment Station since June 1955, and who will attend the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

M/G Buchanan to Korea

Maj. Gen. David H. Buchanan, commanding general of the 1st Infantry Division and Ft. Riley has been reassigned and will assume command of Provisional Joint Military Assistance Group (Korea) early in December. He will leave Riley about 10 October.

He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Harvey H. Fischer, currently commanding general, Southern European Task Force, U. S. Army, Europe.

Awards And Decorations

When I see an American Soldier wearing a Combat Infantry Badge above a thin row of ribbons devoid of any decorations except the Purple Heart (which is almost always present) I get the feeling that our whole system of awards and decorations is wrong—dead wrong. It is a shame and somewhat of a disgrace that people, unknown but to God and the Pentagon, have repeatedly blocked proposals to award the Bronze Star Medal to holders of the coveted CIB as was the case in World War II. These awards were for meritorious service only.

In early 1951 I was ordered to stand parade while passing through Sasebo Replacement Depot as a "Hospital Returnee" back to the front lines in Korea. The occasion for the formation was that a member of the depot cadre was to then receive his first oak leaf cluster to the Bronze Star medal for meritorious service at the depot and that person never had left Japan! Most of us "Returnees" had been wounded and were then en route for some more of the same. At least they could have given the award to him in an office ceremony.

Defenders of the system will say that the situation was all straightened out after the last war and was completely fair during Korea—and it probably was fair better for the rear area people—but for the fellow with the blue badge, he was still forgotten, by all and sundry, except other Infantrymen.

Family Dental Care

Like many service wives, I am trying to manipulate the family budget in an effort to eke out money for payment of dental bills for work done by a civilian dentist on myself and my children. While so doing it has been disclosed that the wife of the Secretary of Defense, Mrs. McElroy, has received dental care at Walter Reed Army Hospital free of charge.

I am afraid I find this grossly unfair. Mr. McElroy has explained that it was dental work that "had to be done." There are hundreds of service wives and children in the Washington area with dental care that "has to be done," and will have to be paid for out of service men's salaries—service men, such as my husband, whose length of service is far greater than Mr. McElroy's one year.

I am, also, at this time, forced to consult a civilian optometrist for my children, since in the Washington area there is no such care provided for Army dependents, and Medicare will not cover the charges involved.

My husband is a career officer, as was my father, and we have remained loyal to the Service through thick and thin—until now. I'm sure the average civilian thinks the pay raise (not retroactive) will cure all ills for the Service family. What the civilian doesn't know is that our housing allowance is completely inadequate for the Washington area—that the assumption in the last year of the premiums for the service man's government insurance and the added social security payments, that the usual percentage deducted for income tax plus the rising cost of living and such added expenses as those for dental and optical care, more than nullify the pay raise.

Heretofore, I have confined my criticism of the Services to the company of Service people, but this is the last straw. I do hope the Army dentist gave Mrs. McElroy novocain—I've seen many service men suffer through without it!

ARMY WIFE

Retired Discrimination

The services expect retired personnel to act as liaison between the services and the civilian population but how can we explain the discriminations in the new pay bill? Neither we nor the Administration can claim economic reasons, not when the Administration insists that Congress give it four billion dollars, this year, for its various giveaway programs, generally known as Economic Aid, to countries friendly and unfriendly.

As a result of the tragic sell-out of retired personnel, by the Administration and Congress, I feel I can no longer, and still have a clear conscience, advise young people to seek a service career. I have no way of apologizing to the hundreds, perhaps thousands, of men I have advised to seek a service career. Why an apology? An apology for my being so naive as to believe that the Government would keep the faith with so many of the people who did so much to help keep our country free.

How can anyone assure our present active duty personnel that they will not receive the same treatment later? Many know they will not be, or even hope to be, Generals or Admirals at the time of their retirement. A precedent has been established relegating retired personnel to a third or fourth class category. It has often been said that "precedent establishes the law." Now that the precedent has been established I believe many active duty personnel will think hard and long before making a service career a "full" career. Those responsible should realize money alone cannot induce a man to select a service career; faith, justice, and fair play often outweigh the monetary rewards.

T/Sgt. Seiler Wins $500, Hollywood Trip For Naming North American B-70 "Valkyrie"

T/Sgt. Francis W. Seiler, one of 13 to suggest the name—his entry had the earliest postmark—has won the North American-SAC B-70 "name the plane" contest.

His name for the new chemical bomber: Valkyrie.

Sergeant Seiler of March AFB, Calif., receives a $500 bond and a three-day expense paid trip in Hollywood.

There were 20,235 entries in the contest.

Only information available to the contestants was the fact that the North American plane will travel at speeds of about 2000 miles per hour at an operational altitude of about 75,000 feet, and that it will be chemically fueled.

A SAC announcement noted that "in Norse mythology, legend places Valkyrie as a minion of Odin, the Norse God of War, and describes her as a maiden of great beauty who ranged the skies on her steed in golden armor deciding the outcome of the battle."

ADMIRAL ARLEIGH BURKE, making his first public address after the Quantico, Va., Secretaries Conference during which Secretary McElroy expressed "regret" and "disappointment" at some of the CNO's testimony on Defense Reorganization, made an unusual point in speaking to a Navy League group last week. He stressed that the Navy "has absolutely no control over your fine organization," adding that "active duty Naval officers cannot be members of your organization and indeed the Navy does not even always agree with the Navy League."

NOTEWORTHY BACKGROUND of the Admiral's speech is that the Navy League has come out strongly against major portions of the President's Reorganization Plan. CNO Burke seemed here to be emphasizing that the Navy does not endorse all of the viewpoints of the League on this matter, though Defense Reorganization was not mentioned specifically.

ONE SENTENCE in the Admiral's speech could be interpreted as having a double-edged purpose. "It is not enough that you be right," he said. "The country cannot afford to lose the benefit of sound naval thought by the default of an advocate's inability to put a point across." Admiral Burke was referring to the need for public understanding of the importance of seapower, but his words were particularly interesting in the light of his recent Congressional testimony.

RETALIATION AGAINST DEFENSE WITNESSES who testify in opposition to the President's views on Pentagon Reorganization has not been completely ruled out. Secretary McElroy repeats his opinion (page 2) that there "should not" be any question "of retaliation or penalty for such testimony," but this is not unequivocal assurance. The reason, of course, is that if the President wished to take action against any of the officers, the matter would be out of the Secretary's hands.

BECAUSE OF HEAVY ATTRITION among first-year cadets at West Point and the USAF Academy, the Pentagon is asking Congress to approve about 59 more annual appointments for each school to keep the "average" enrollment up to par. The appointments would be made by the Academy Superintendents from among eligible alternates and competitors. The plan's chances are good since it would give members of the Congress an opportunity to place more of their nominees in the Service schools. The Naval Academy, also faced with high first-year attrition, already has machinery to circumvent the problem.

MORE MARINES ARE NEEDED for Special Foreign Duty with the State Department. Marines guard embassies overseas. Sergeants and corporals are being invited to apply for about 100 vacancies.

THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT will conduct a vigorous campaign to encourage military men and their families to exercise voting rights in the forthcoming elections. In the 1956 voting, the Services accounted for 660,000 votes—35% of eligible Servicemen. This was more than double the 15% who voted in 1952.

A $40 BILLION BUDGET notwithstanding, the Air Force was caught short of funds to reimburse its Pentagon people for taxicab fares from 1645 on 26 June to 0800 on 2 July.

ARMY MISSILE EXPERT Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris was in error when he said in a prepared statement during Project Ammo briefing that the Little John missile now is in use by the 101st Airborne Division for training and development of combat techniques. The Little John indeed had been issued to the 101st at Fort Campbell, Ky., but was taken away in favor of the bigger Honest John, which is not air transportable, presumably because the smaller missile failed to meet reliability requirements. The 101st and the Army's other Airborne units soon will get the Chopper John, a helicopter transportable version of the Honest John.

SUPERB PRESS ARRANGEMENTS for Project Ammo won for Army PubInfo officers unusual praise this week at Fort Bliss, Tex. Acting for scores of newsmen from all parts of the nation, veteran Scripps Howard Aviation Editor Max Cook asked and was given permission to express appreciation during a dinner gathering at which Army Secretary Brucker spoke. Special mention went to Maj. Gen. Harry P. Storke, Chief of Information, and Col. George Creel of the Office of Public Information. Reporters said the Ammo arrangements were outstanding.

THE PRESENCE AT FT. BLISS of large numbers of top civilian and military leaders prompted the Signal Corps to make special arrangements for contact with Washington. Regular communications channels were bolstered by teletypewriter facilities, including crypto transmission through Top Secret. An unclassified voice circuit also was installed between Bliss and the White House.

PROJECT AMMO was months in preparation. A good guess is that in the future, the Defense Department will make such events all Services affairs. This would be in line with the increased emphasis on Unification in Public Information activities.

NEW WEAPONS now come in three sizes, according to Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo.): Regular, King Size and Where-Is-Everybody?

BACKBONE of the new SAGE air defense system just put into operation at McGuire AFB, N. J. (story on p. 1) are the civilian employees of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. SAGE's whole communications system, says General Earle E. Partridge, USAF, North American Air Defense Commander, is operated, even within the top-security SAGE complex itself, entirely by Telephone Company employees.

FURTHER DEPENDENCE upon civilians is foreseen for the system by General Partridge, who says the Air Force must "resort" to civilian maintenance contracts for SAGE because the system is so complicated.

THE ARMY-SPONSORED H-40 helicopter, built by Bell, is undergoing evaluation studies by the Air Force which indicates that it shows great potential as a rescue vehicle. The H-40 is a turbine powered two-bladed rotor job.

IN THIS AGE OF ELECTRONIC detection, there's still a place for the sentry dog. The first large-scale training of sentry dogs at Ft. Benning will be conducted this Summer. They are to be replacements for Army Air Defense Command and forces in Korea. The dogs, German shepherds, are purchased by the Army Quartermaster office at from $100 to $150 per dog.

AMA Urges Senate To Restore Assistant Secretary For Health And Medicine

The American Medical Association wants the Congress to continue the position of Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical).

Under the Pentagon Reorganization Plan, the top medical official of the Defense Department would become a special assistant to the Secretary of Defense.

Dr. Richard L. Meiling, Chairman of the AMA's Committee on Military Medical Affairs, has urged the Senate Armed Services Committee to keep the position on the Secretarial level. Doctor Meiling served in the Pentagon post before it was boosted to the Secretariat.

He said experience has clearly demonstrated the need and effectiveness of the position in the formulation of military medical policy and programs throughout all echelons of the Department of Defense.

The AMA takes the position, he testified, that to abolish or downgrade the position of the Assistant Secretary "would have a most deleterious effect at all echelons within the defense organization upon the medical and health services of our Armed Forces and upon the morale of military personnel."

He said, "In addition to eliminating a central agency within the Department of Defense for dealing with military health problems, the abolishment or downgrading of this office would be reflected in the inter-agency health programs within our own government and in the medical and health relationships between our government and the other governments with whom we are allied."

The AMA asked that the Reorganization Plan be amended to provide that one Assistant Secretary of Defense be specified for the field of health and medicine.

General LeMay Urges Improved Conditions

General Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, has called upon all major commanders to direct their efforts toward improving living conditions in the Air Force.

He termed the recently-enacted pay hike only one of several important improvements needed to insure a professional force.

"If the full effects of this new pay increase on personnel retention are to be realized," he wrote, "we must strengthen our other programs including those to improve living conditions and minimize individual hardships."

He reminded staff agency heads and major air commanders that all commands were notified in August 1955, that family housing and personnel facilities would enjoy equal priority with operations; requirements in Air Force plans.

Observing that significant progress has been made in utilization of available facilities, the General noted that "much remains to be done."

He told his officers that headquarters will take steps to obtain relief from family housing restrictions "imposed by higher echelon."

"Modern weapons are only as good as the people that man them," he said. "Therefore, we must continue to plan for attainment of mission objectives with a minimum of detrimental effect on personnel of the Air Force."

Alaska Statehood Could Bring Changes

How will admission of Alaska as a state affect Servicemen stationed in the area?

The Defense Department said it believes the cost of living allowance will be continued.

"It must be remembered, however," DoD said, "that future administrative decisions could change the situation."

The Defense Department contemplates continuing "overseas tours" for some time to come. This, it was said, is due to the physical difference between Alaska and the continental U. S., and to the fact that housing is not adequate.

As the territory grows and housing becomes more available, DoD states, "the picture would change as to our determination."

There is no impact on voting. Officers and men assigned to Alaska have absentee ballot rights.

SAC Sqn. Opens Series Of Snark Test Shots

The Intercontinental missile Snark moved closer to full operational status when a SAC Strategic Missile Squadron began a series of operational prototype firings at the Air Force Missile Test Center, Cape Canaveral launch site.

SAC's 556th Strategic Missile Squadron, under control of ARDC's 6555th Guided Missile Squadron, made the first prototype shot of the Northrop missile on 27 June. The series of firings is designed to test the Squadron's capability and "are the final step in development of Snark as a useful weapon for SAC's global striking force," the Air Force said.

Among the 556th Squadron members who participated in the shot was Test Director Capt. G. E. Sapp; T/Sgts. P. A. Countryman and D. M. Givens; S/Sgt. M. W. Denny; and A/2C R. J. McCarthy. The Squadron is led by Col. R. W. Beck.

Members of the 6555th Squadron who supervised the shot were Capt. J. C. Bowers, Operations Officer; and M/Sgt. George C. DeRidder, Missile Crew Chief; and M/Sgt. E. P. Williams, Test Engineer.

The 6555th is commanded by Maj. R. W. Cullen. The Squadron was the first to launch an Air Force Tactical Prototype Guided Missile TM-61, the Martin Matador. The Squadron also trained members of the 1st and 69th pilotless bomber squadrons which have been deployed overseas.

FOURTH DIMENSION FIGHTERS

The Reserve Officers Association of the United States has called for a more aggressive policy and greater use of reserve personnel in Fourth Dimensional Warfare.

Forseeing for cooperation on this subject with the National Guard Association of the U. S. and other Government agencies, the ROA placed great stress on the Fourth Dimensional use of retired Reserve personnel who have the greatest prestige, experience, skills and the "largest amount of time available."

Asked what Fourth Dimensional Warfare means, an ROA official said that it was something like psychological warfare.

ROA Asks Study Of Reserve Retirement Practices; Wants Full Strength Units

The Reserve Officers Association of the United States has called upon the House Armed Services Committee to investigate its charges of discrimination by all Services against Reserve officers in disability retirement procedures.

The ROA's demand, specially singling out the Army, was contained in a resolution of its Annual Convention in Atlantic City, N. J., 25-28 June.

"Surgeon General of the Army and, to a certain extent, the Surgeons General of the other Services" the ROA said, "have developed a dual standard for physical qualification of Reserve officers in that they require a Reserve officer to be better qualified in order to be commissioned in the Reserve or ordered to active duty than the requirement of his physical status when relieved from active duty."

False Security

Association officials said there are "many cases where Reserve officers are physically qualified to be relieved from active duty but when they attempt to enroll in an active Reserve unit they find that they are physically disqualified for the same disabilities existing when they were relieved from active duty."

In another resolution the Association noted that the "present policy of citing military organizations as indicative of national strength and readiness even though all such organizations are not fully combat ready engenders a false feeling of security among our citizens."

Personnel and equipment shortages existing in many military organizations of the active military establishment, the association said, "make it virtually impossible to prepare those organizations for effective combat operation."

Retired Pay Revision

To rectify this situation, the Association proposed that all active military units carried on the combat ready rolls of the Armed Services be brought to and continuously maintained at full strength and equipment.

The ROA Convention also urged enactment of new retired pay provisions by Congress to restore the "historical relationship" between active duty pay and retired pay.

ROA officials concluded that the "incentive value of the existing military retirement program depends to a major degree upon its integral relationship with active duty compensation and the confidence which has been built up in the military body that no breach of faith or breach of retirement contract has ever been permitted by the Congress and the American people.

In other resolutions, the association:

- Pressed for higher Selective Service induction standards and extension of the draft until 1963;

- stress that "under no circumstances" should representatives of news media be denied direct contact with the individual services;

- scored Budget Bureau actions to "freeze" Reserve appropriations and asked that neither the Budget Bureau nor the Defense Department be given the power to divert Reserve funds;

- suggested that any future Armed Services' reductions in force apply to both Regulars and Reservists on the same basis;

- supported legislation to provide contracts for Reservists on active duty;

- asked for a cancelling of ROTC obligations if the graduates are not called to active duty within a specified period;

- endorsed plans to train Reservists at air defense missile sites near their homes;

- backed efforts to reorganize the Department of Defense;

- criticized the "apparent demotion" of Army enlisted personnel going into effect as part of the new military pay plan;

- supported the right of Service Chiefs and other military officials to testify to give a "frank expression of his professional views and convictions" to Congress;

- called for a reevaluation of the Air Force Reserve program;

Navy Seeks Officers For Post Grd. Courses

The Navy announced it is seeking applications for postgraduate training commencing in 1959.

Deadline date for applications to the Chief of Naval Personnel is 1 November.

In general, eligibility for post graduate education includes USN officers and in many instances USNR officers (on active duty) of the following categories: line, aviation line, engineering, aeronautical engineering, special duty specializing in communications, supply and civil engineering. Also eligible are women officers and officers designated for limited duty (LDO) in curricula appropriate to their specialty.

The Navy's prime graduate level educational facility is the U. S. Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Calif.

Mission Of School

The mission of this School is "to conduct and direct the instruction of commissioned officers by advanced education, to broaden the professional knowledge of general line officers, and to provide such other indoctrination, technical and professional instruction as may be prescribed to meet the needs of the Naval Service."

Advanced engineering and scientific education are provided at the facilities of the Engineering School at Monterey and at various civilian educational institutions throughout the country.

Advanced professional education is provided through the medium of the General Line and Naval Science School and the Management School at Monterey.

Certain specialized graduate curricula are conducted in entirety at civilian educational institutions.

An applicant for curricula commencing at the Engineering School, Monterey need not possess a bachelor of science degree; however, he must meet the following minimum academic prerequisites: mathematics through differential and integral calculus and one year of college-level physics; a course in engineering mechanics is desirable. In most instances those curricula given in entirety at civilian educational institutions require a bachelor's degree.

Shift In Emphasis

To meet current and future training requirements, increased numbers of unrestricted line officers will be phased into the Postgraduate Educational Program over the next few years. In the past the policy provided that the majority of the graduates of technical engineering curricula become restricted line specialists. Today the policy permits graduates to remain unrestricted line officers if they so desire.

In making the announcement about increased P. G. training, the Navy said: "At no other time in history has postgraduate education played as prominent a role in an officers career pattern as it does today. Generally speaking, graduate level education of unrestricted line officers serves a two-fold purpose in the Navy. It enhances the career opportunities of the young unrestricted line officers, and it provides officers to the Fleet who are equipped to supervise the operation of increasingly complex weapons systems thereby raising the general engineering experience level of the Fleet. It provides officers for restricted line designations who are equipped to provide the necessary link between the contractor and the operating forces in activities associated with research and development."

The Committee, composed of leading Air Force Reserve and Regular Air Force members acts as a principal advisor to the Secretary of the Air Force on policies and regulations affecting the Air Force Reserve.

With a similar group of Air National Guard officers and Regulars, this Committee joins to become the Air Reserve Forces Policy Committee, considering matters of interest to the Air Force's two Reserve components.

German Archives Basis For "Operation Sea Lion"

Official military material from captured German archives form the basis of a new book published recently by Oxford University Press, 114 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

"Operation Sea Lion" by Ronald Wheatley describes the genesis and development of the German High Command's plans to invade Britain.

Hitler first considered an invasion in the summer of 1940. Mr. Wheatley traces the military preparations, their state of readiness in September 1940, and the reasons for the plan's successive postponements and final rejection.

The German evidence shows that despite the air and naval obstacles Hitler fully intended to embark on this operation, provided Goering's preliminary air offensive achieved the expected results.

Mr. Wheatley's book originated as one of the special studies made in the preparation of the official United Kingdom military history of WW II. The book has 7 half-tone plates and 5 maps. The appendices include translated documents and an order-of-battle chart.

29 Old Warships Embroil Navy In $12 Million Disposal Controversy

The Navy has been caught in a rough and tumble controversy involving two powerful Congressional Committees, five old battleships, 11 cruisers, 13 carriers and $12 million.

The ships are now in mothballs and the Navy wants to get rid of them. It costs about $12 million annually to keep the vessels in cold storage. The Navy says they are "unfit" for further service.

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy agrees. He says removal of the ships from the Reserve Fleet will give the Navy some needed berthing spaces so it can put more ships in mothballs.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee is strongly opposed. He has told the Navy he doesn't consider it wise just now to dispose of any Reserve Fleet ships larger than a destroyer.

Mr. Vinson's word is law around the Navy, and top admirals, even though they would like to get rid of the ships, have been in no hurry to defy their strongest spokesman in the Congress.

Not, at least, until called on the carpet about the ships by the House Appropriations Committee. The Appropriations group wanted to know what was holding up disposal of the vessels. They don't see eye-to-eye with Mr. Vinson on the matter.

VADM. R. E. Wilson, Deputy CNO for Logistics, explained that the Navy also takes a contrary view to that held by the Armed Services Committee Chairman. He said the admirals intended to try "more persuasion" to get Mr. Vinson to change his mind.

List Of Mobilization Producers Made Public

For the first time, an unclassified edition of the annual "Register of Planned Mobilization Producers" is available to the public.

The Register, which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., for $1.00, lists about 18,000 plants with whom the Army, Navy and Air Force plan for military production in a war emergency. The volume was prepared by the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics).

Tragic Mishap Marks Start Of Record Trans-Atlantic Stratotanker Flights

Two Air Force KC-135 Stratotankers, flying from Westover AFB, Mass., to London and return to Floyd Bennett Field, L. I., have set new transatlantic speed marks, after a third plane crashed on takeoff while attempting the same feat.

Takeoff of a fourth plane was cancelled after the tragic accident which took the lives of 15, including six nationally-known newsmen.

Fastest time on both portions of the trip were set by the lead plane, Alpha, carrying flight commander Col. Harry Burrell. Its total time for the east-bound leg was 5 hours, 27 minutes, 32.8 seconds. Westbound time for Alpha was 5 hours, 51 minutes, 24.8 seconds.

Bravo, the flight's second plane, made the east and west bound legs of the trip in 5 hours, 29 minutes, 37.4 seconds, and 5 hours, 53 minutes, 21 seconds, respectively.

Those killed in the crash of the third stratotanker 27 June were:

Brig. Gen. Robert A. Ginsburgh, USAF-ret., Associate Editor of U. S. News and World Report;

Brig. Gen. Donald W. Saunders, USAF, airborne commander in charge of the operation;

Lt. Col. George Broustas, USAF, Aircraft Commander;

Capt. James E. Shipman, USAF, Navigator;

Capt. John B. Gordon, USAF, Third Pilot;

1st Lt. Joe C. Sweet, USAF, Co-Pilot;

M/Sgt. Donald Gabbard, USAF, Boom Operator;

T/Sgt. Joseph C. Hunter, Crew Chief;

Daniel J. Coughlin, Associated Press, Boston;

Robert B. Sibley, Boston Traveller Aviation Editor;

Norman J. Montellier, United Press International, N. Y.;

James L. McConaughy, Time and Life Bureau Chief, Washington, D. C.

Glenn A. Williams, Associate Editor of U. S. News and World Report;

William Cochran, National Aeronautics

Association Observer;

William Enyart, former President of National Aeronautics Association.

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy and USAF Chief of Staff General Thomas D. White issued the following statements:

"We in the Department of Defense are deeply saddened by the tragic KC-135 crash which took the lives of seven able and dedicated officers and airmen of the Strategic Air Command, six of our newsmen friends, and our two National Aeronautics Association colleagues. Personally, and on behalf of everyone in the Department, I wish to extend my heartfelt sympathy to their families."

NEIL H. McELROY
Secretary of Defense

"The Air Force deeply regrets the unfortunate accident which cost the lives of six representatives of the nation's press, in addition to two representatives of the National Aeronautics Association and seven members of the Air Force. The mission on which these men had embarked was a routine one in every respect, except that it was also a demonstration; it was a demonstration of a new capability of the United States Air Force as one of the principal guardians of world peace. In order that people of the United States and of other nations may know and understand the steps by which we are diminishing the time and space that separate the nations of the Free World, we have often shared these notable experiences with men who are trained to observe and to report them. As we share with these men the conquest of time and space, they share with us the dangers of that conquest."

"This unfortunate accident serves as a reminder to all of us that the men who observe and report the achievements of science and skill that are so necessary to our survival, are partners in these achievements. They are also partners in the sacrifices that sometimes are the price of progress. The men who represent the world's need to know, and who in peace and in war share the dangers and the fate of our men in uniform, are equally worthy of the nation's gratitude."

THOMAS D. WHITE
Chief of Staff, USAF

Iven Kinchloe, USAF, Mr. Scott Crossfield, NAA, and Mr. Joe Walker, NACA. The Johnsville experiments started 16 June and will continue through 25 June.

Donald W. Gere, a former FBI special agent and Atomic Energy Commission administrative officer, has joined The Ramo-Wooldridge Corporation, Los Angeles, as head of security planning, according to announcement by Richard J. Healy, assistant director of industrial relations for security. Mr. Gere also served with the Army Reserve Military Intelligence Branch, and held the rank of 1st Lieutenant.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

ARMY LOGISTICS OFFICERS—Maj. Gen. Farmer W. Edwards (left), Deputy Commander of the U. S. Army Air Defense Command, welcomes conferees during the USARADCOM Supply and Maintenance Conference at Ent AFB, Colorado Springs. Nearly 50 representatives from Army installations throughout the United States attended the conference, to review new concepts for consolidated supply of Nike missile units of USARADCOM. With General Edwards are (left to right) Col. Chesley F. Durgin, G-4 (Logistics) officer, 1st Region, USARADCOM, Ft. Totten, N. Y.; Col. James F. Eason, G-4, 2d Region, Ft. Meade, Md.; Col. S. E. ### Money Problems Bug ARDC Test Program

Although the Air Research and Development Command spends over $3 billion each year, some of its testing programs may be hampered by lack of adequate funds, according to Brig. Gen. J. W. Carpenter, USAF, Assistant ARDC Vice-Commander and Chief of Plans and Programming at the Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

Specifically, General Carpenter points to the chaff testing facility being constructed at Melbourne, Fla., which, he says, "is still incomplete after three years, although the importance of chaff has been recognized for 10 years."

"Funding for this facility is so low," General Carpenter says, "as to hamper the testing program."

In attempting to develop the most effective R&D effort over the next few years, General Carpenter says, ARDC expects to complete a long-range financial estimate by May 1959. This estimate, he said, will provide some guidelines on the research and development funding program over the next 10 to 20 years.

At the present time, General Carpenter estimates, ARDC capital facilities are growing at an average rate of about $100 million per year. If it is to maintain the "evolutionary" pace of weapons system development, he says, capital expenditures will have to increase about 10 per cent.

Col. John L. Zoeckler, USAF, Assistant Deputy Director of Weapons Systems, Directorate of Procurement and Production, Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, will become Assistant Deputy Director for Weapons Systems of the Ballistic Missile Office, Ingleswood, Calif. Callaway, 2614th Air Reserve Center; Col. Edward J. Perkin, Commander of the 9545th Air Reserve Squadron, representatives of the Services in the Philadelphia area, plus General Electric Reserve representatives.

Peak Electronic Sales Are Seen This Year

U. S. Armed Forces will spend a new record of $4.33 billion on electronic defense this year, according to Don G. Mitchell, Chairman and President of Sylva Electric Products, Inc.

Speaking in Buffalo, N. Y., Mr. Mitchell estimated that the electronics industry's 1958 defense business "would exceed the industry's total in all civilian and military fields only ten years ago," and constitute a $330 million rise over 1957.

Temco Names New Chief Project Engr.

Thomas Courtney, jr., design research specialist with wide aircraft and missile experience, has been named Chief Project Engineer for Temco Aircraft Corporation, Vice President for Engineering Robert E. Galer has announced.

Mr. Courtney was formerly with McDonnell Aircraft Corporation in St. Louis.

With Temco, he will assist and report directly to the Vice President for Engineering. Temco engineering projects include the TT-1 jet trainer, the Corvus air-to-surface missile, the XKDT target drone, and several classified electronics systems.

Mr. Courtney was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1941 and worked for Curtiss-Wright as stress analyst. He joined McDonnell in 1942 and was in charge of the Plastics Division prior to naval service as engineering staff officer the Commander, Fleet Air, Western Pacific. He rejoined McDonnell after his World War II service.

Protection In Weapon Testings Asked By AIA

Passage of a bill providing protection to the public through government indemnification in connection with unusually hazardous risks arising from the Defense Department's weapons programs is urged in an editorial appearing in the June issue of Planes, official publication of the Aircraft Industries Association.

Congress already has provided up to $500,000,000 in indemnification protection against the hazards of nuclear materials used by licensees and contractors of the Atomic Energy Commission. The bill now before the House Armed Services Committee would grant similar indemnification for Defense Department contractors.

"Today the air weapon industry puts its corporate neck on the block every time a weapon system is tested. Claims for damages could far exceed the amount of assets of the largest manufacturers in this industry. This would result in the bankruptcy of the company, and still leave unsatisfied claims for damage far in excess of the assets," the editorial states.

Army Missile Command Creates Lockheed Unit

The Army Ordnance Missile Command has established a Field Office at Sunnyvale, Calif., at the Lockheed Missile Systems Division.

AOMC has a West Coast Field Office at 55 South Grand Ave., Pasadena.

"The new office will assure rapid and continuous exchange of technical information between the several agencies of the Missile Command and personnel who are developing the Navy's Polaris Missile System," Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, Commanding General, declared.

He pointed out the Army is working on large, solid propellant rocket projects and large ballistic missiles.

Capt. John G. Jones has been appointed chief of the new office. Lt. Col. Glenn Crane heads the Pasadena office.

New In Service

VAPOR LUBRICATION of frictionless ball and roller bearings at the Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio, allowed the bearings to operate at up to 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit without the use of oils and greases as lubricants. The hydrocarbon vapor, developed by the Shell Oil Company, prevents abrasive metal oxides from forming on the bearings by continuously "filming" their rubbing surfaces.

HIGH-SPEED ELECTRONIC PRINTER, first of Stromberg-Carlson's S-C 5000 models, will be delivered to the Washington Army Engineering District this month. The machine can print more than eight times as fast as present electro-mechanical printers.

Singer's HRB Opens New Headquarters

Opening of its new permanent headquarters at Science Park, State College, Pa., was commemorated with an open house 1 July by Haller, Raymond and Brown, Inc.

The general public was invited to tour facilities of the research and development firm, which is a branch of The Singer Manufacturing Company, New York, N. Y. On view was equipment in operation, mock-ups of advanced scientific developments and placards describing the company, its facilities and equipment on exhibit.

Recent expansion, the company said, enables HRB to participate more actively in the newly formed Singer Military Products Division of Singer Manufacturing, to which a majority of the increased facilities will be devoted.

HRB, founded in 1947, is staffed by 35 scientists and assistants and still is expanding rapidly. The company does research and development work on such devices as infrared reconnaissance equipment, radar relays, fire control and surveillance systems, computers, and antenna systems and builds prototypes of these. HRB is also actively engaged in the new fields of operations research and human engineering.

Speakers included Dr. George L. Haller, vice president of General Electric Company, general manager of GE's Defense Electronics Division, Syracuse, N. Y., and a founder of HRB; Rep. James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.); Merritt A. Williamson, dean of the College of Engineering, Penn State University; and Bernard F. Gira, president, Topp Industries, Inc., Beverly Hills, Calif.

Also, Donald P. Kircher, president, The Singer Manufacturing Company; William R. Davlin, Pennsylvania secretary of commerce; the Rev. William F. McClain, pastor, State College Presbyterian Church, and State Senator Jo Hayes. John L. McLucas, HRB president, introduced the speakers.

Singer Military Products Division, which HRB participates as the research and development branch, includes also the Bridgeport (Conn.) Division of Singer Manufacturing and Diehl Manufacturing Company, Somerville, N. J.

Headed by Frederick W. Howells, formerly with North American Aviation, Convair and Boeing, the Military Products Division was created to develop and produce electronic and electro-mechanical equipment for defense industries at the Armed Forces, with special emphasis on the missile and space fields.

The Navy has awarded five contracts totaling more than $9 million for the minesweepers, eight patrol boats, tugs and two barges.

Peterson Builders, Inc., Sturgeon Bay, Wis., received a contract to prepare working plans for, and to construct a wood ocean minesweeper for $3,585,825.

The sweeper will be 171 feet long, have a 35 foot beam and displace 750 tons.

Tacoma Boatbuilding Co., Inc., Tacoma, Wash., received a contract to prepare working plans for and to construct two wood coastal minesweepers. These minesweepers will have an overall length of 145 feet, a beam of 26 feet, and a load displacement of 378 tons.

In addition, the Tacoma Boatbuilding Company will construct four 100-foot patrol boats for $940,240.00.

Boeing Will Expand Honors Program For Airmen Who Fly Its Aircraft

A PLAN to honor all SAC crewmen of Boeing-built aircraft, similar to the present B-47 1,000 Hour Award, has been revealed by Col. Ralph W. Stanley, SAC Safety Division Chief.

The new plan continues the B-47 1,000 Hour program and adds the following new programs: the KC-97 1,500 Hour Award, KC-135 2,000 Hour Award, and the B-52 2,000 Hour Award.

In these categories all flight crews are eligible, Colonel Stanley said. A SAC regulation to cover the details of administration of the program is in preparation.

Boeing Airplane Company, which simultaneously announced its support of the plan, will supply the appropriate pins and certificates to the eligibles.

With the addition of the three new programs, it is expected that administration for all four awards will be decentralized so that senior commanders at each SAC base will request pins and certificates direct from Boeing twice a year.

Goodyear Receives Convair 'Hustler' Award; Millions In Contracts Let By Forces

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company has been selected to furnish an automatic anti-skid system for the Convair B-58 "Hustler," the delta-winged Air Force supersonic bomber. The system automatically prevents blowouts or other damage to tires caused by excessive braking, regardless of runway surface conditions, by controlling brake pressure. Sensory devices located in wheel axles note unusual wheel deceleration, promptly transmit electrical impulses to release braking pressure on wheel involved.

General Taylor Sounds New Warning Against Paring Of Army Manpower

WHITE SANDS PROVING GROUND, N. M.

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor has sounded a new warning against cuts in Army manpower.

He took the occasion of closing remarks at Project Ammo here, following a brilliant display of the Army's family of missiles to declare:

"Let's don't forget that the battle is not won by hardware. It is the quality of the fighting man that insures victory."

The Army Chief of Staff said he is not one of those who believes that missiles will replace fighting men, "but instead will impose new demands upon them."

General Taylor hailed the progress the Army is making on the missile front and said that the speed with which new weapons are made available to units depends largely upon budget factors.

General Taylor introduced three of his top deputies, Lt. Gen. Arthur Trudeau, Research and Development; Carter M. Grunder, Logistics; and James F. Collins, Personnel.

Urgent Requirement

It was with the introduction of General Collins that the Chief of Staff told an audience of top civilians from Government and Industry and scores of military men that the urgent requirements will continue for adequate numbers of skilled military manpower.

General Taylor's remarks came at the close of a second day of missile shoots July during which the Talos, Nike Hercules, Hawk, Dart, Little John and Lacrosse missiles were fired.

Two sea service officers participated prominently in the Army show. Cdr. T. C. Buell, USN, gave the briefing on the Talos missile and Capt. Emil Whisman, USMC, gave the briefing for Little John.

Redstone Briefing

A briefing on the Redstone was given by Col. A. S. Hirsch, who will command the new 46th Redstone Field Artillery Missile Group. The Sergeant briefing was given by Maj. W. Anderson and the Nike Hercules presentation by Capt. P. Bryson.

Maj. W. W. Paris described the Hawk and Capt. H. H. Lapan the Dart. Maj. C. C. Von Miller handled the Lacrosse briefing.

The program was concluded as Maj. Gen. W. E. Laidlaw, who commands the all-Service White Sands missile range, told the throng of about 500 visitors that "we were glad to have you and are glad you are leaving."

System of Weapons Management

TOMORROW'S
IS TODAY'S CHALLENGE AT...

AIRCRAFT CORPORATION • DALLAS, TEXAS

Temco's capabilities in electronic research and development . . in systems management . . are making Temco a leader in the electronics field. Take Temco's work in autopilot development, for example. While converting several Army Signal Corps L-17s to radio-controlled reconnaissance drones, Temco found no suitable "commercial" autopilot. So Temco engineers developed their own . . an inexpensive, simplified unit that met all special requirements . . provided wide-range reliability and control.

Then Temco engineering came up with a low-drift d-c servo-system and a low-power d-c "pecking" amplifier . . took the basic autopilot they had developed . . miniaturized and repackaged it for use in Temco's rocket-powered transonic Teal target drone. The result: "Teal" became the first "missile" of its type to be successfully launched from a swept-wing aircraft and to operate effectively at altitudes up to 50,000 feet.

Today this know-how is directing development of "Corvus" . . the Navy's highly classified "stand-off" air-to-ground missile . . with Temco as weapon system manager. It is being used in the development and production of special flush-mounted antenna systems . . microwave devices . . advanced guidance systems . . airborne TV systems and many classified projects.

Temco's complete systems management capabilities are ready to meet your challenge.
